SENCERE BROWN

There is an adage that states, "Parents just know". Sencere's parents knew very early on that he possessed an innate ability to be a student of the arts. He began performing at the age of 6 in school talent shows and later began studying drama. His persistence, passion and talent landed him in leading roles in school plays, while also dancing with a Competition Hip Hop Dance Company and playing point guard on the basketball team.

Sencere moved into the professional acting world in 2019 and continues training consistently to enhance and sharpen his acting techniques and methods. To date, his filmography includes multiple short films which ultimately paved the way for such opportunities as; playing young Rod Wave in Rod Wave/Lil Durk's music video, "Already Won", appearing in Atlanta Hawk's Trae Young's Body Armor commercial, being featured in Emmy winner Jonathan McReynolds' videos, Snoop Doggs MGM movie "Under Doggs", Cast as 'Franklin' in ABC's "The Wonder Years".

Sencere graduated from Douglas County High in Douglasville GA and was selected by Class of 2024 as the most likely to be an Influencer/Celebrity. While studying for an Associate in Business, Sencere plans to also continue studying Theater and training professionally with acting. He welcomes every opportunity as a step closer to the life he desires for himself and his family.
